Taher attacks oil firms for excess profits

By Younis Issac

JEDDAH, Dec. 28 - Petromin Governor Dr. Ahdul Hadi Taher says the final takeover of Arameo will be completed soon and the company will be changed into the Saudi National Oil Company.

In an interview with Asharq Al -Awsat, he also attacked excess profits made by the oil majors from the relatively low price of Saudi Arabian crude. He said that the Kingdom would rather see lower prices for the consumer and reduced company profits.

Asked about the failure of the Caracas OPEC meeting to agree on a unified price structure. Taher said that the grave imbalance between demand and supply in the world had made it inevitable. He suggested. though, that after the winter demand and supply would move back into balance and spot prices fixed by the market as well as the high levels of prices demanded by some OPEC member states would naturally full.

But he advised caution: "The best thing to do is to wait until the next OPEC meeting. when the situation will he clearer."

He said that France's oil entitlement to Saudi crude supplies has been renewed on the same terms. Originally agreed in 1974, the entitlement is 250,000 barrels a day, renewable every three years. The agreement would have expired at the end of December. He denied, however, reports from Copenhagen that Oenmark had secured a government-to-government entitlement.

Taher also spoke of the possibility of setting up an Arab petroleum consulting firm within the Organization of Arah Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC). The issue was stable but declined marginally against the Japanese yen to close the week Friday at 239.50 yen, slightly lower than Thursday's finish of 239,725 yen.

DAMASCUS, Dec. 28 (R) - The Syrian government, apparently stung by the surprise defection of its amhassador to the United Nations, said he resigned after being recalled for supporting the peace pact between Egypt In a first reaction to the resignation Thursday of Hammound El-Choufi, an official government source said Thursday night he had been ordered home after adopting a stand contradictory to Syrian policy at the latest U.N. debate on the Middle East. The source said Choufi had collaborated openly with Egypt's U.N. delegate and had come out in favor of the Camp David agreements on the Middle East which led to Egyptian-Israeli peace pact last March. Syria has strongly opposed the peuce ter Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani has predicted that oil supplies would exceed demand in the mid-1980's provided Iranian output did not decline.

Yamani sees oil glut in mid-80's

"There will undoubtedly be a surplus on the international market," be told reporters after a meeting with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing Thursday.

Yamani disclosed that France and Saudi Arabia had cooeluded a major oil contract for the next three years.

Yamani denied reports that his governmeot had decided to raise its oil price by two dollars a harrel in February," No decision has been taken," he said. "Oil price increases are determined by the oil market and the price of Saudi oil is below those prevailing on the international market."

He said he thought the last OPEC meeting which ended without a price increase, was a victory for the moderates, but that it would take time to make a final judgment. The minister said his country would continue to produce 9.5 million harrels a day for the first three months of next year, but he would oot forecast figures for later. He had come to Paris to give Giscard d'Estaing our views about the future, about

A total of 14.7 million tons of Iranian crude oil was sipped into Rotterdam in the 11 months to November, compared with 29.5 million tons for the whole of 1978, he added.

The decline was particularly large in the past few months. Only 730,000 tons of crude oil from Iran entered the port in November followed by 300,000 tons in the first two

"Every congressman I've spoken to or heard or read about supports investigations. The only question now is whether the investigations will begin before the hostages are released." he said.

Iranian students have held the Americans captive since they occupied the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4. They are demanding the Shah's extradition for trial here, but Hansen said he thought fran would "settle for less than the actual physical return of the Shah." The ousled monarch is now in Panama after having medical treatment in the U.S.

Hansen visited Iran last month, three weeks after the embassy siege began and was allowed to see some of the hostages. He would not say if he had been promised a similar visit this time.

Hansen said he was travelling on his own infiiative and with his own funds. His first Iran visit was disowned by the White House and President Carter said such moves might endanger the hostages' lives.

"I think that there is a time for unorthodox action when you have unorthodox circumstances," the congressman said Friday, adding that more conventional American diplomats are either locked up or locked out."

He would not say what contacts he was having with Iranian authorities hut denied that he had been invited to sit on an international panel to examine U.S. involvement in Iran which Foreign Minister Sadeq Ootbzadeh is trying to set up.

ISLAMABAO. Dec. 28 (R) — Soviet troops took part in heavy fighting that accompanied a coup in which Afghanistan's President Hufizullah Amin was toppled and quickly executed, informed diplomatic sources said Friday.

Quoting reports from the Afghan capital of Kahul, the diplomats said Russians were seen manning tanks and armored personnel carriers during three hours of tank and artillery duelling that ended at midnight Thursday

The sources said sporadic automatic rifle fire continued throughout the night.

Kahul Friday was packed with armored vehicles, particularly around the radio station and the Mikoroyan housing complex where hundreds of Russian civilian and military advisers live, the sources said.

Radio Kabul said Amin had been eliminated for ever, after summary trial by a revolutionary court. It announced a new revolutionary council headed by former Vice-President Babrak Karmal had taken power, with assurances of Soviet support. including military assistance.

The radio said president Amin headed a despotic, tyranical regime that had been responsible for the deaths of a great number of innocent people. The coup followed a massive airlift of Soviet combat troops into Kahul and the Bagram Air Base, 80 kms to the north. Diplomatic sources in New Delhi said 5,000 Soviet soldiers were airlifted into Kabul in 48 hours. The U.S. government, which earlier accused the Soviet Union of blatant interference in internal Afghan affairs, said there also has been a buildup of Russian forces along the Soviet-Afghan border. Within hours of taking over the presidency. Karmal pledged he would see a political solution to the widespread Muslim rebellion that had threatened his predecessor and led Moscow to boost its military involvement.

Earlier this year, the Soviet Union through its embassy in Kabul, had been urging the government to seek a political solution to end a costly insurgency in which guerrilla forces have taken away the government's control of the country and pushed it back to strongholds in the capital and major towns.

A spokesman for the right-wing religious group Hezbe Islami told Reuters the coup had brought no change to the government and said his forces would continue the struggle to establish an Islamic republic.

Other insurgent leaders were studying the new administration before commenting, spokesmen said.

Karmal announced a 14-man cabinet that included mainly members of the Parcham (Flag) wing of the People's Democratic Party, which had been ruled by Amin during his three-month presidency, and before when he was premier.

Like other Parcham leaders, Karmal had been sent abroad and later charged with high treason in his absence.

His government included officials from the pre-revolutionary administration of King Zahir Shah and President Oaoud, as well as three popular military heroes who led the coup against Daoud and were purged in September by Amin.

The soldiers, Lt. Col. Muhammad Aslam Watanjar, Maj. Sherjan Mazoorya and Lt. Col. Sayeed Muhammad Gulhazoi, tonk refuge in the Soviet embassy after the coup in

Diplomats said Karmal appeared to have expanded the base of the government in order to win wider popular support and prepare the way for a political solution to the Muslim insurgency.

In Tehran an Afghan exile movement hased in Iran said Friday it would fight on against the central government in Kahul despite the change of the regime.

The Bureau of the Islamic Movement of Afghanistan said in a communique telephoned to Reuters: "The Islamic movement considers the continuation of the fslamic struggle till final victory as an Islamic and national necessity and this is the belief of the Muslims of Afghanistan."

The movement said: "The overthrow of the treacherous Hafizullah Amin and the coming to power of the mercenary Babrak Karmal, a lackey of the Soviet Union through the direct intervention of foreign masters, makes the decisiveness of the Muslims of Afghanistan in taking back independence and national sovereignty more serious."

New Jeddah airport to start in year

JEDDAH, Dec. 28 - The opening of the new Jeddah International Airport is now planned for a year's time.

According to Saudi Business Saturday, Parsons Daniel, the constructioo manager on the airport site, has been told to plan for December 1980 as the time for initial operations to start.

Col. Said Yousef Amin, director of the International Airports Project, a division of the Ministry of Defense and Civil Aviation, says that "the exact opening date nf NJIA (New Jeddah Ioternational Airport) can be set only after an in-depth evaluation using computer simulation is completed to determine the most efficient and safe air traffic control procedures tion plant. available to permit simultaneous operations at both NJIA and the existing airport.

"It is expected that the study will be completed by next spring. After the acceptance of the study, it will be necessary to train all air and ground personnel involved in the Jeddah termioal area."

Work on the project, 19 kilometers north of Jeddah, was originally divided into two phases. The first was to cover two ruoways, an aircraft refuelling system, north and south terminals, a TriStar maintenance hangar, an air cargo terminal, a food service building, navigation and communication systems, ground support equipment, a Royal Pavilion and the first phase of a desalina-

The second phase, to be carried out between 1980 and 1985, was to include a 747 hangar, a Royal Saudi Air Force base, the Pilgrimage Terminal, a Saudia maintenance building, special flight services and geoeral facilities, a hospital and quarantine area, ao administration building, the second phase of the desalination plant and an air mail huilding.

Amin says that "it should be recognized that the approaching completion of Phase 1 at NJIA does not mean that construction will be completed. On the contrary, construction will continue at NJIA for years to come as major facilities are developed, including the RSAF base, airline aircraft maintenance and general aircraft maintenance facilities."

The areas of work for which contracts have not so far been let are RSAF aircraft maintenance, general aviation, and administration and health care.

of Mootreal/Dorval, Toronto and Dallas Fort Worth.

The price is not oegligible. The first estimate of total cost, submitted in the early 1960s by Ioternational Aeradio, was for a project costing $ 20 million. Minister of Defense and Aviation Prince Sultan said recently that halfway through Skidmore, Owings and Merrill's master plan, adopted in 1974,$4 billioo had beeo committed to the project.

The main contractor oo the airport is Hochtief of West Germany. Architects and consultants include Edward Durrell Stone, Lockheed Aircraft International aod Yamasali aod Associates.

The two runways have been built to a length of 3,300 meters and 3,800 meters to give the aircraft enough room to get off the ground in weather that reduces the thrust of their engines. Trepel Airport Equipment of West Germany is to provide 20 mobile lounges that will allow 44 aircraft to park simultaneously and to leave assigned gates under their OWIL DOWER.

The figures are almost too much for comphrehension: The Food Services Building is to produce 43,000 meals a week, and 72,000 box lunches a day during the Pilgrimage. The air cargo terminal will handle 150,000 tons of freight a year, with a storage capacity of 7,500 tons at an 11-day turnover rate. The 103,000 square meters of South Terminal will be faced with 6,500 tons of white Italian marble. The North Terminal can take 2,500 passengers an hour. The desalination plants will produce 10 million gallons of drinking Economy and members of the water a day. In the Royal Pavilion, 750 telephones will be provided.

WEATHER

It will fine during the day and cool at night in most areas. It will be cold at night in the Northero Regioo.

Medium cloud will hang over the ceotral and northern regions, with possible scattered rain. Winds will be moderate and southerly to sonth-easterly. They may be occasionally active in the northern and central regions, causing sand haze.

Begin calls for army alert to face 'threat' from Syria

MAALE, ADUMIM, West Bank Dec. 28 (R) — Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin has said that Israel's anned forces must remain on guard against a continuing military threat posed on its north eastern border with Syria.

Begin was speaking to members of a tank corps unit at a military hase Thursday near this West Bank township which Israel plans to incorporate in a new industrial suburb outside Jerusalem.

"The northeastern burder is noisy and tumultous and there is no doubt that danger exists. We can only minimize it by maintain-has rejected statements by Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin that Israel will maintain control over the West Bank of Jordan.

This was a violation of the Camp David accords, a foreign ministry official said Thursday.

Begin was reported to have said in Kiryat Arha, on the outskirts of Hebron in the West Bank Wednesday, that Israel will maintain control of the territory.

Begin also denied before the Knesset (parliament) Wednesday that the proposed autonomy plan for the West Bank and Gaza Strip Commenting an reported Israeli plans to spend$ 300 million in the next fiscal year on building Jewish settlements on Arah land. the official said "Any new Israeli policy to create settlements is the establishment of an independent Palestine state.

We will never agree to a PLO state because it is a direct threat to our existence, and if we take the Soviet presence into account, to the existence of the free world as

On the issue of new Jewish settlements in occupied territory Begin stated emphatically: "No part of the land of Israel is exempt from Jewish settlement."

Speaking later to residents of Maale Adumim A some 16 kins east of Jerusalem, which is to form the nucleus of an industrial satellite town for Jerusalem, Begin said: "Maale Adumim is a continuation of Jerusalem, I come here with joy, happiness and much pride...in the future Maale Adumim will have assured the future of development without evicting even one Arah resident."

Begin's visit to Maale Adumim was his second to the West Bank in accords and the spirit of the two days, after some 20 months during which he had not toured any part of the accupied area.

His visit to Kiryal Arha, the Jewish suburh of Hehron, Wednesday night, was interrupted by beckling from a small group of members of Rabbi Meir Kahane's Kach Party, an offshoot of the Jewish Defense League Rabhi Kahane established in the U.S. and Israel, retiring coordinator of U.N. forces in the Middle East has said he saw no easy solution to the problem of Lebanon. In an interview with Israel radio

Over detention of Bhuttos

Haq have been increased by a constitutional petition filed in the Sind High Court. It challenges the detention of the widow and daughter of the executed former prime minister, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, and the very legitimacy of Zia's military The legal move was made in the Sind High Court, rather than the Supreme Court, partly because of its reputation for independence established earlier this year when it ordered the release of Bhutto's daughter, Benazir. Another reason is that the Bhuttos, as the first family of Sind, could probably expect fairer treatment there in their challenge to the Punjabidominated martial law regime.

In the past, the courts have been subservient toward successive governments. Judges of the provincial and supreme courts took a fresh oath in July, 1977, after the imposition of Martial law, and none of them apparently found it incompatible with an earlier promise to defend the 1973 constitution of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

In 1958 the martial law regime of Gen. Ayuh Khan was given legitimacy on the ground that a "successful revolution destroys the constitution" But the Supreme Court declared in a 1972 case that Gen. Yahya Khan's martial law regime was "a usurper" - after the general had fallen from

The courts are notorious for reversing themselves, however. When Mrs. Bhutto tried to use the 1972 case to question the validity of the Zia government, the Supreme Court managed another about-face. This time it justified Zia's coup on the grounds that he had stepped in to save the country in a grave national crisis and that he had promised to return to civilian rule as quickly as possible.

The Supreme Court's assent to Zia's takeover was conditional on his holding early elections, not tampering with the jurisdiction of the courts, and not bringing in a new legal order. The president to be elected would take office under the 1973 con-Subsequent actions by the government have disregarded these conditions. There has been a widening rift between the courts and the government made worse by Zia's announcement on Oct. 16 that civil courts would have no jurisdiction over sentences passed by military tribunals. There is mounting public pressure on the judici-here were, at various times, signs of hope for solving the grican-Iranian crisis. But these always tended to fizzle out a while, leaving the two parties entrenched in their inal uncompromising positions.

Political auction rages in New Delhi

By Kevin Rafferty

NEW DELHI -A record number of candidates, averaging almost 10 for every seat, will fight India's general election in the first week of the new year. But the 350 million voters are still waiting for the hubbub of defections and rumors of defections to die down the real campaign to begin

All the talk since the election was announced at the end of August has been about how many people would defect to Mrs. Indira Gandhi, who would be the leaders of which parties, and which parties would be linked with which.

A recent cartoon by "Abu" in the masscirculation Indian Express showed Chandra Shekhar, president of the Janata Party, standing outside a door marked "J. Ram" as if on guard to see that Jagjivan Ram stayed in the party.

The in-fighting for potential defectors became so bitter that at one stage both Sanjay Gandhi and Suresb Ram, the sons of the leaders, were in league to get Ram to join the Indira Congress, as Mrs. Gandhi's party is known. Negatiations failed, it is rumored, because the offices offered were not good

Ram, who has the distinction of having served in practically every cabinet - except the present 'caretaker' one - since the Constituent Assembly in 1946, may not have defected, but several other leading figures have been prepared to join their sworn enemies in the hunt for preferment and

H.N. Rahuguna, Janata finance minister under present Prime Minister Charan Singh, has gone back to Mrs. Gandhi, whom he left just before the 1977 election with Ram. Bramananda Reddy, minister of industries under Singh, has also gone back to Mrs. Gandhi, whom he left amid vitriolic exchanges after the election. The consensus is that the contest is between Mrs. Gandhi and the rest, with Janata being regarded as the main opposition. The Lok Dal of Charan Singh seems likely to take a wedge of seats among the Jat farmers of the Hindi-speaking northern heartland, while the All-India Congress picks up what is left with the regional parties.

But it is difficult to predict any outcome. There has been no "Indira wave" as in 1971, no "Janata wave" as in 1977, no wave at all except the wave of disgust at the displays of self-interest. "Politicians all they care about is how much they make," one of a group of Punjabi farmers practically spat out, adding for good measure some choice epithets in the local dialect.

so busy fighting their own fights that they have not managed to put up a common candidate to fight Mrs. Gandhi, At Rae Bareli, Mrs. Gandhi's old constituency where she was defeated in 1977, there will be a 26-cornered contest, and at Medek there are 10 candidates, including Mrs. Gandhi. She is the only leader to be fighting from two constituencies, which may be a measure of her uncertainty.

Sanjay Gandbi is also contesting the election, and his papers were accepted in spite of bis conviction on criminal charges and a sentence to two years' rigorous imprisonment which would disqualify him from standing. His appeal is currently before the supreme court.

Even Mrs. Gandhi's party has been beset with dissension, with the long-standing members resenting the upper hand gained by the Sanjay-wallahs (supporters of Sanjay Gandhi) and Sanjay Gandhi unhappy that Rahuguna has been allowed a small share of the spoils in picking the party lists.

The manifestos of the parties all express a concern for the people and the abolition of poverty which is often difficult to detect in their programs while in power. The Janata and Lok Dal manifestos tend to be more factual, while the Indira Congress one is mainly a tirade against the Janata, and a defense of Mrs. Gandhi's period in power.

A comparison of the manifestos brought a comment from the independent Economic Times that Mrs. Gandhi was accusing the Janata of plunging the country into chaos while defending a period of rule which "brought the registered job-seekers on the live register from 2.5 million to over 12 million, lowered the industrial growth rate from 9 per cent to 4.2 per cent, imprisoned the private sector in a spider's web of controls, and totally corrupted public life by creating avenues for the entry of "black" money into the political process. — (OFNS)

China's mounting lawlessness

By Dennis Bloodworth

SINGAPORE ---

400 Chinese legal and police experts ended their gloomy discussions earlier this month on the mounting lawlessness in China's overcrowded cities. The Peking Daily reported the trial of two gang leaders charged with organizing a street battle in the capital itself, involving 140 hooligans armed with knives, spades and zip-guns.

This was no isolated case. It was disclosed in October that frustrated gangs in Shanghai and Tianjin (Tientsin) had turned to beating up and robbing passersby in broad daylight when the rival mobs they had arranged to fight failed to arrive for a Crime in China, where formerly no one even carried a key, is now commonplace, and the miscreants range from cold-blooded killers, armed robbers, rapists and fire-raisers to gamblers and pickpockets and prowlers working in pairs to mug or molest girls leaving night-school.

The stock explanation for much of the urban violence is that during the Cultural Revolution of the mid-sixties, in which Vao pitted juvenile leftwing Red Guards against the entrenched party hierarcby that was defying him, young people were encouraged to "seize power" and to "rebel" against their parents, their teachers, and established

They were finally dispersed and sent down to the villages to "learn from the peasants," but now tens of thousand have swarmed back into the towns to swell the ranks of China's 20 million unemployed, and - their minds poisoned by the depraved "Gang of Four" - have brought their instinct for anarchy

But that analysis does not take into account the passage of time. Most of the Red-Guards of the sixties are now in their late twenties or early thirties, whereas in 1977, nearly 70 per cent of all crime detected in Cbina was committed by youngsters, and in 1978 the figure rose to 73 per cent. According to the official press in Shangbai, "more than half of the youth and children involved in criminal acts are school students," and the average age of the inmates of Peking's reform schools - now increased from three to 10 - is only 16.

Moreover, many teenage troublemakers are the offspring of important cadres within the party bureaucracy that the Red Guards set out to destroy. While the affluent society of the capitalist West may breed spoiled brats who become delinquents, it is self-evident that children of all ages can be corrupted by a proletarian system of power and privilege that could produce the case of Chang

This enterprising young farm-worker, distressed at the prospect of ending his brief new year spree in Shanghai and returning to the farmyard as a mere son of the soil again, opted for a more prestigious paternity. Claiming to be a senior cadre of the Sbanghai Party Committee, he rang up the Opera House and asked an official to give a good seat to his friend "Comrade Li," the son of a deputy chief-ofstaff of the People's Liberation Army down from

He then presented himself at the theater as the imaginary Li. He was ceremoniously ushered into the best seat in the house, taken backstage after the show to meet the players, laid down loftily what was good and bad about their performances, and from that moment never looked back...

He acquired the girl of his choice from the talent available in the city's threatrical troppes; and then moved in on ber parents. He also acquired a car by making a fake long-distance call to a senior Sbanghai official and, posing as his illustrious "father" in Peking, demanding that he put that ultimate Chinese status symbol at his "son's" disposal.

With a government car (and wearing a smart new military uniform) he could gull anyhody, and when the obsequious new friends who dined him, gave him presents and offered him money, asked him to use his influence to get them a bigger house or a better job, he took it in his stride. For the influence the farm-hand did not possess was magically there for the non-existent son of the general.

He was tripped in the end, but not before the lesson had been rubbed in. Comparing his successful masquerade to "the government inspector," Gogol's Play about a similar imposter, the veteran Chinese author Ba Jin remarked acidly. This satire written by a Russian more than a hundred years ago actually ridicules us." To cheat people in Socialist-China, a Canton newspaper added, requires no props at the outset — just say you are the son of a first party secretary or a deputy chief-of-staff, and the trick is done."

The corollary is that if you really are the son of a party secretary (as another joker had pretended) within the Communist caste system, you may quickly come to believe the world owes you a plush living — and rebel if you do not get it.

The Peking press has accused senior cardes of demanding privileges not only for themselves, but for their offspring of using their influence to save their sons from being sent down to farms to which they had already been assigned (or bringing their back and resettling them in urban luxury), and of allowing their wives and children to order up official cars for their own frivolous use. It has also charged them with "going through the back-door" to get their loved ones party membership, plum jobs, or permits to go abroad, with sending their young to special schools, treating them as if they were auto-matically the future masters of China - and using their power to protect them when the got into

A study carried out in Chinese school has shown that the only child is particularly susceptible to the coddling that can later lead to lawlessness. And now there will be more only children, for paradoxically Peking is encouraging families to "stop at one" in order to hold down the population and reduce unemployment, which is itself one of the major contributors to the current crime wave, You do not have to be a cadre's son to be tempted. Older malefactors persuade students still at school that they are wasting their time studying because there are no jobs for them, and when they come out into the world they join a queue of seven million youngsters already awaiting assignment. The government is tackling this problem energetically, and more than million of the idle io Peking, Shanghai and Tianjin have been placed this year But most earn only enough to feed themselves, and if other - "aimless, without future or ideals." take the wrong road, they may be reformed by the proliferating "educational aid teams" or in special. work-and-study schools, but too often factories do not want to employ them afterward: (OFNS)

Pakistan's prisoner

By Lawrence Lifschultz NEW YORK -

The arrest of Salamat Ali, Pakistan correspondent of the Far Eastern Economic Review, on Nov. 13 and his sentencing two weeks later to a year's hard labor by a summary military court brought to the fore the issue of democratic rights in Pakistan. By convicting Ali of publishing a news report on Baluchistan that allegedly promoted batred between different classes and provinces, Pakistan's martial law authorities bave enacted a complete parody of the motives they expressed when they seized power in July 1977.

There were two premises to the military putsch: one was that new elections would be held within 90 days; the new government charged that the former prime minister, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, had rigged the national elections held im March. The second, and equally significant, was the commitment to end four years of brutal civil war in Baluchistan province.

Pakistan's Baluchistan problem arose in 1973. Three years earlier, in the first genuine elections in Pakistan, a coalition led by the National Awami Party won power in the province. However, by 1973 the Shah of Iran had begun to express displeasure about this development. The Shah was noticeably restless about an elected socialdemocratic government in the province that bordered his entire eastern flank.

He had considered the internationally "nonaligned" National Awami Party pro-Soviet ever since it had opposed Pakistan's joining any alliance, but in particular America's grand regional military alliances. The Shab told Bhutto he did not want the party in power in Baluchistan. Iran was emerging as the main financial donor to Pakistan's debt-ridden economy. With grand hopes of Pakislan's becoming an integral element in the Shah's even grander dream of a Persian-style "co-prosperity sphere," Bhutto obliged. He dismissed the elected provincial authorities in February 1973 and eventually arrested the leadership of the Baluchistan National Awami Party. There then began one of the fiercest and least-reported wars in

In the mountain warfare, Pakistan suffered as many casualties as in the 1971 Bangladesh war. More than 100,000 Pakistani troops in repeated campaigns of "enforcement and suppression" failed to subdue the well-organized insurgents. The Shah's armed forces were involved: Americansupplied helicopter transports of the Iranian Air Force were used — with Washington's knowledge but in violation of Pentagon regulations - to ferry Pakistani troops across the ravines and mountains of Pakistan's most extensive province. The conflict lasted four years, until Gen. Zia Ul-Haq's coup brought a ceasefire.

The issue of provincial autonomy and democracy is recurrent in Pakistan. It was central to the war that led to the creation of Bangladesb from the province of East Pakistan.

The junta leader, Gen. Zia, has now abandoned the two premises by which he sought to lend legitimacy to his coup: new elections and reconciliation

Having abandoned both commitments, the military authorities now persecute a reporter who wrote the unpleasant news about where government policies have led. This behavior was also typical of the last days of the Bbutto and Yabya Khan regimes. Newspapers were closed, journalists were gunned down, and selected foreign correspondents were told not to eneter the country.

Salamat Ali put it in a nutshell as he bravely faced the Rawalpindi military tribunal: "It is the plight of an objective reporter that he is disliked by all governments"— (NYT)

In an editorial on the graduation of the 17th batch of air force officers, Al-Medina stressed the significance of the air force in modern warfare and said that the state has given allout assistance to the King Faisal Air Academy while the latest batch has been trained on most modern training standards. The paper expressed pride especially because the graduating cadets also included a some from Bahrain, North Yemen and Sudan. It reaffirmed that the Kingdom was anxious to adopt every method that helped in consolidating peace and security in the region.

Al -Jazirah described the King's meeting with the airforce officers as a "picture of great coherence between the leadership and the armed forces personnel." The paper praised the air force cadets for their high technical capability and expressed admiration for the advanced techniques they learned at the academy. In another editorial, Al -Jazirah warned the Islamic nation and the states of Southeast Asia against the Communist danger and turged them to be prepared at all times to face this danger. "The Communist danger loomed large over Afghanisian, Pakisian and Iran. Communism wanted to bring the whole Southeast Asian region under its domination and to obliterate all the traces of Islam and other religions in that region." it

The paper called on the Islamic states to react to the Communist influence in Afghanistan, as the people of that country now stood alone in resisting Communism.

Writing on the Lebanese situation, Al -Riyadh expressed pessimism on any possible solution to the Lebanese problem during the coming year. It said there will be more of the international negligence toward the Middle East, as the Soviet Union was busy with looking for a possible successor to Brezhnev and France was preparing itself for the 1981 elections. while the United States was busy with its own problems in the country and abroad. "Moreover, the economic conditions that might change as a result of the expected shifts in the political trends in the world may also not allow much time to find a possible solution to the Middle East problem," it said,

"It was only because of the preoccupation of the big powers with their own problems that the Zionist enemy has found time and freedom to attack the Arab states and play with South Lebanon as he wished." the paper added.

It reaffirmed that Saudi Arabia's strength was dedicated to the Arah nation in its struggle to restore the usurped rights, especially those of the people of Palestine, and to thwart all dangers facing the nation.

In the same context, Al -Nadwa said that the graduation of a new batch of air force officers asserted the essence of Saudi Arabia's policy that a cause, no matter how just it was, could not find any firm base without power. A Middle East Balance Sheet for the United States (3)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the third and last instalment of a new study by the Palestine Arab Delegation in New York, which represents the Beirut-based Arab Higher Committee for Palestine. The study was prepared under the direction of Issa Vakhleh, chairman of the Palestine Arab Delegation and per naneat representative of the Arab Higher Committee in New York) POLITICAL CONSIDERATIONS

No single group operating within the United States has as much influence upon the political decision-making process as does the Zionist lobby. It has traditionally been able to control Congress in large part because of the tremendous wealth at its disposal and the support proffered to the lewish-controlled media. Using these tools in the very strategic area of the United States policy in the Middle Fast, the lewish lohby has been able to thwart real American interests.

The Zionist lobby is able to muster extremely extensive letter writing. long distance telephone call-in, and telegram eampaigns at the drop of a proverbial hat. This is made possible by the wealth of the Jewish community in this country and the willingness of its members to contribute large sums of money to the different Zionist organizations involved in such lobhying efforts. The entire operation is streamlined because so many of. the groups have a tax-exempt status meaning the monetary contributions they solicit become deductible for the person making the

Over the years these groups have been generous in giving large honorariums for speeches by supportive politicians. Obviously, this sort of liaison is difficult to repress. Unfortunately, the American people little realize how much they are paying, directly and indirectly, to he deceived.

The work of the lobby is revealed to he even more oppressive when it is realized control of the media means stories in the news can even be orchestrated to appear that letters, telephone calls, and telegrams are a genuine outpouring of public opinion on the issue being considered. In reality, these "voices" are merely a small, special interest group operating with great efficiency under highly skilled leadership,

As a result of the reckless use of such leadership and power, the Zionists have cost the United States taxpayers billions of dollars for the military support of Israel when peace could have been easily attainable instead. The American consumer pays more for oil today because of the blind support by politicians for the goal of the Zionist lobby - which works for a foreign

Furthermore, if the Zionist influence continues to grow, there will be more unemployment in America, Anti-Arah activities by Zionisis make it increasingly difficult for American dealings with the Arab World which means fewer orders for American products from that important market. Add to this the intense Zionist elforts to prevent Arabs from investing in the American economy and the potential economic cost of the Zionist lobby's political activities are very significant,

Zionist acts not only disturb America's Middle East policy but adversely affect United States relations with the Soviet Union. For instance, the intense public pressure upon the Soviet treatment of dissidents has angered the Soviet Union and caused them to be less cooperative in dealings with

Furthermore, such activity by the lobby appears to have contributed to the American government's decision to publicly pressure the Russians to change their position on the treatment of dissidents. This in turn led the Kremlin to seemingly take an even harder line with these individuals and the United States, in the eyes of most of the remainder of the world, looked foolishly impotent. The existence of such perceptions is hardly in the national interest of the country.

Agitation about Soviet Jews has hrought the United States and the Soviet Union back into a defacto cold war which is in the best interests of no one. It has also resulted in important trade agreements either being negated or not even discussed, meaning lost potential jobs for Americans and greater difficulties for the United States citizens attempting to conduct business in the Soviet Union.

Even traditional Western European friends have become targets of the American Jewish lobhies, For example, ever since France changed its Middle Eastern policy to a more rational and just approach, there has been considerable effort by Israel supporters to poison relations between the United States and Paris. This is particularly serious because of I rance's crucial role in the event of hostilities in Europe.

It is ironic that the Israeli lobbyists label the French as merchants of death because of the sale of French arms to the Arah countries, yet no such concern is voiced over the massive shipment of American weapons to Israel. For that matter, there seems to be a paucity of heed over Israel's sale of arms to such places as South Africa.

It is readily apparent the ledger shows a highly negative tall as the result ' of Zionist political lobbies in the United States. Correspondingly, nothing of positive value to America as a whole can be found with such activity.

Comparatively, the Arab states have not set out to develop any large scale lobby effort in the United States, which probably explains why American-Middle East policies are so often held hostage by the Zionists. Consequently, little can be shown on a balance sheet to evaluate the Arah efforts although it could be argued that the lack of activity by the Arah supporters is a negative factor because there is no alternative lobhy to effectively challenge the Zionists.

MORAL CONSIDERATIONS If any nation is to be a world power in any ultimate sense, and hopes to transcend the challenges by totalitarian and spiritless competitors, then its moral and ethical standards must be beyond reproach. Therefore, it is essential to examine United States support for Israel within the context of the American principles and to be certain such support does not contradict those moral foundations upon which the United States was built.

Briefly, the United States opposes the acquisition of territorics by conquest of any type. This principle is carefully adhered to in the many international agreements to which the United States has become signatory. including the Charter of the United Nations.

In addition, the United States has long been the champion of the right of people to enjoy the option of self-determination. The principles of Woodrow Wilson and the idealism surrounding his concepts are highly revered and it is not suprising that the United States is a defender of human rights throughout the world. Though some might argue America's present human rights campaign is too agressive, they must acknowledge the attempt to bring about improvement in the treatment of humanity is a rather typical type of American commitment.

Thus it is within that context the American policy of supporting Israel must be examined. While the emphasis must be on moral grounds, it is essential to also consider some of the practical aspects of that policy.

First of all, the legitimacy of the very establishment of the state of Israel should be called into question. Israel's nationhood materialized on the heels of a violent campaign of Jewish terrorism which perpetrated the murder and forcible displacement of millions of Palestinians.

A crime was committed against an entire people-a crime rivaled in scope only by the atrocities committed by the Nazis against the Jews. Israel: A Liability The Arab World: An Asset

The political arrangements preceding and attendant to Israel's establishment were accomplished with no regard for the wishes of the people indigenous to the land in question. Immigration decisions, settlements, partition, etc. were all made by outside powers with no proper regard to the self-determination of the Palestinians.

Even today various human rights of the Palestinians in Israel continue to be ignored. First among these are the most elemental of "human" rights: freedom from torture, freedom from terrorism, and the right of families to be reunited and to remain together. In Israel, and especially the occupied territories, Palestinians who are suspected of collaboration with such groups as the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PI.O) may be routinely arrested and tortured for the extraction of information.

Palestinian villages, competing with Zionist settlements in the occupied territory for such scarce resources as water, have been razed by Israeli buildozers or simply denied adequate water supplies. Efforts by Palestinian residents to make improvements on their homes have been systematically thwarted by new Israeli settlers in an effort to drive these people from their homes and from the occupied territorics in general. Additional rooms constructed on existing homes to accommodate new children in the family have been torn down by Israeli military heavy equipment.

It has been a consistent policy of Israeli military occupying authorities to disrupt Palestinian family and economic life through the use of identity cards as passports for both internal and external travel. By making it extremely difficult for those who have left the occupied territory to return, families have been foreitly separated and Palestinian businesses have been disrupted—all as part of the campaign to force Palestinian emigration.

While Israelis loudly demand civil rights for themselves, the same rights are denied the Palestinians. Having little or no self-determination and lacking full representation in any legitimate and sovereign constituent assembly. Palestinians may properly be said to enjoy no real political

All of this hehavior has been justified in one way or another by Israeli authorities as heing conducted in the interests of "Israeli national security." The question arises here as to what constitutes "national", what constitutes "security", and what constitutes a legitimate "threat" to this

The answer to what is "national", of course, might be found by defining what territory does, and/or should constitute the state of Israel. If we assume Israel, as it has been constructed, is an illegitimate entity in the first place, then "national security" considerations are likewise illegitimate and therefore irrelevant. If we assume that Israel in some form or other, e.g. pre-1967 borders, is legitimate, then such "national security" operations such as the bulldozing of Palestinian homes on the West Bank are illegitimate.

The matter of what constitutes "security" poses the additional question of whether such "security" measures as are taken should be for actually making Israel secure or merely for the purpose of making the Israeli government "feel" secure. To accommodate Israeli "feelings" is to accept some of the prevailing myths such as the alleged necessity of having extra

The fact that territory cannot provide security was proved conclusively by the breaching of such a "defensible border" as the Sucz Canal in 1973. In reality, true security can be achieved only through legitimate peace sett: cnt with all the parties concerned -i.e., any party that might possess the power to render the Israeli situation "insecure"-and this must certainly include the Palestinians. The key issue here, then, is the original one-i is legitimacy of the state of Israel-and the degree to which that legiting y is questioned by forces powerful enough to pose a threat to Israel urity.

Thus far, Israeli policy has been to attempt to divide, disperse, and exterminate that threat. But what does this mean? It means the division, dispersion, expatriation, terrorism, and murder of the Palestinian people. Is this a legitimate and moral goal the United States can condone?

American support for this Israeli policy can be questioned as well on grounds of United States national interest. In short, the United States has three primary interests in the Middle East: If the maintenance of good political and economic relations with most Arab countries for access to oil. petro-dollars, and strategic henefits; 2) the exclusion of the Soviet Union from influence anywhere in the area; and 3) the prevention of war in the area which could erupt into a larger, global conflict, and disrupt American oil supplies, not to mention drain the United States of the resources -- both financial and military-which would go to subsidize the Israeli side of such

The Israeli policy of dispersing and exterminating the Palestinians constitutes the very sort of provocation which, if supported by the United States, can jeopardize all three of the United States interests. That this Israeli behavior antagonizes all the Arab states there can be no doubt.

As for the Soviets, the Arabs have no need for them whatsoever- execpt as a source of military supplies. So long as the United States continues tn support the Israeli policy, the Soviets will find a market among the Arahs. Finally, Israeli policy has so far provoked four Middle East wars. Unless it changes and attempts to deal with the question of Palestinian legitimacy and self-determination, more wars are in the offing. So as long as the United States continues support of this policy, it will suffer all the adverse effects of such war.

War will inevitably bring with it serious economic ramifications of the type that follow embargoes. There will fullow a weakening of the national security of the many Western nations, particularly the United States, which rely on Arab oil. If the pattern of the last Middle East war is repeated, there will be a critical and highly expensive draw upon American military supplies, and the Soviet Union and the United States could come into direct confrontation with each other. Ultimately, America's moral foundations will again be shaken and its international respect seriously undermined.

Thus it is apparent Israel's activities are largely in dissonance with the policies followed by the United States in the all-important arena of national morality. Israel violates the very basic standards that America has tried so hard to uphold. Surprisingly, the Zionist state is doing to the Palestinians much of what the Nazis did to the Jews, It is most ironic that a people having suffered so much so recently would consistently perpetrate heinous crimes against another people who are militarily weaker.

On the Arab side, little can be said except those states are attempting to rectify the situation caused by Israelis aggression. Their fight to keep the world aware of what the Israeli's have done and are doing is wholly inconsistent with the American concept of human rights and selfdetermination. The Arabs did not let the world forget about the Palestinians even though the Zionists attempted to convince the rest of the world the Palestinians did not exist.

Now the Arab states are continuing their reasonable efforts to guarantee the Palestinian people will have the right to their own country where they can determine the course of their own future. These Arab states are, in a manner highly consistent with American ethics, working diligently to make certain the Israelis do not get away with projecting the image of giving the Palestinian people self-rule while really only allowing them to operate their own school, postal offices, and telephone systems, all of which are subject to ultimate Israeli control and abuse. Likewise, the Arab countries are also valiantly opposing the establishment of additional illegal Jewish colonies which can only further deprive indigenous Palestinians of their basic rights.

Thus, in an ultimate sense, the ledger sheet in terms of moral considerations shows that Israel is a very definite liability with scant assets. Comparatively, what the Arabs are trying to accomplish squares very well with American concepts of morality among and within national boundaries and the right of each group to freely determine its future.

Unfortunately and ironically, the very efforts being exerted by the Arab states are made necessary because of the United States support for Israel which has made Israel so powerful it appears to defy any nation, even the United States, to challenge its right to continue such abhorrent actions. It is most damaging to the American image on the international scene to argue for human rights and demand them in such countries as the Soviet Union and parts of Africa—while supporting Israel, a Zionist state whose actions make America an accessory to War Crimes, Crimes against Humanity, and the Crime of Genocide against the Palestinian people.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the previous brief discussion, it is apparent that America's relations with Israel and the Arab states cannot be justified when examined in ledger sheet manner. The startling facts reveal that American support for Israel is nearly always a liability, while closer American-Arab relations usually earn a place on the assets side of the sheet. Perhaps this is the reason Israel and its awesome lobby so vigorously opposes anything that would enable the American people to better understand the Middle East or that would allow more Arab activity within the United States.

Consequently, it is essential that steps be taken to place the facts in the hands of the American people. If direct dealings with the media continue to be fruitless, other avenues of mass communication must be utilized.

In the meantime, however, it is imperative that pressure be brought to bear upon the members of Congress and the Executive Branch of government to change American policy in the Middle East so it will be consistent with United States interests in the area.

To accomplish this consistency, the United States government must adopt a firm position that includes a declaration of neutrality in the Arab-Israeli dispute and termination of all economic and military assistance to the Zionist state of Israel.

In addition, all political support of Israel should be halted and a vigorous American effort should be commenced whereby the United States uses its influences to be certain the principles of international law, justice, and human rights prevail in the Middle East.

Only by adopting such a course of action can the United States extricate itself from the economic, moral, political, and military morass in which it now finds itself because of longtime, wrongful support for the aggressive, criminal actions of the Zionist state of Israel.

AN APPEAL TO THE SENSE OF JUSTICE OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

The Arab Higher Committee for Palestine is publishing this survey as a public service to the American people. We believe that the United States and the Arab World have important political, military, economic, strategic, moral, and idealistic common interests and purposes.

We are placing the facts and figures in this Middle East Balance Sheet for the United States with the hope that the readers will know the truth.

It is the duty of each American citizen who cares about his country and its future, and about the future of the free world, to read this survey.

The United States Middle East policy is dictated by Zionist-Jewish pressure groups in the United States who are agents of Israel. Former Senator J. William Fulbright, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate, stated on the CBS television program "Face the Nation," on April 15, 1973: "The United States Senate is subservient to Israel...Israel controls the Senate...The great majority of the Senate of the United States...somewhere around 80 percent...are completely in support of Israel, anything Israel wants... This has been demonstrated time and again and this has made it difficult for the government."

In a recent interview with CBS-TV network, George Kennan, former U.S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union, stated: "The United States Government represents the interests of the portion of the population which can speak loudest or bring the heaviest pressure on Congress." In reference to the Middle East situation, he stated: "America must recover the full independence from at least the lobbyists in this country before we can treat this question as it should be treated... Once we declare our independence, and once we can act on behalf of the country as a whole, and its interests, then I would like us to show the greatest deference to the need for serving the existence of the state of Israel."

We appeal to the United States Administration and Congress to reconsider U.S. Middle East policy and to adopt the following course:

- 1. Suspend all economic, financial, and military aid to Israel;
- 2. Declare its even handedness and complete neutrality between the Arab States, and the Palestinians on the one hand and Israel on the other.

3. The United States, in its position of neutrality, and as a friend of Arabs and Jews, should use its influence inside and outside the United Nations for achieving a just and lasting peace in the Middle East by solving the Palestine problem, the core of this trouble and bloodshed in the Middle East, on the basis of the principles of international law and justice and the right of self-determination.

The Arabs have never done the United States any harm. It is politically unwise, immoral and inhuman that the United States should adopt a policy which aids and abets Israel in its continuing aggression, expansion and domination in the heart of the Arab world thereby perpetuating the Crime of Genocide against the Palestinian people.

Swiss '80 economy seen sound said Swiss banks had "no interest

GENEVA. Dec. 28 (AP) Fritz Leutwiler, president of the Swiss National Bank, has forecast 'modest growth' and a reduced inflation rate for Switzerland in 1980 provided there was no new upsurge in oil prices.

In an interview published Thursday in the Tribune de Geneve ner" and without violent shocks. newspaper, he said the Swiss gross national product was expected to increase by between one and two per ceol. Inflation, now at 5.2 per cent, should decline again to between three and four per cent, he added.

Leutwiler, who accompanied Finance Minister Fritz Honegger on ao official visit to Saudi Arabia this month, said he had a "certain understanding for the attitude" of the petroleum exporting countries establishing a "certain correlanon' between the price of oil and of the industrial products they are

"Up to now, the increases were in line with this reciprocity and in Swit-

Accidental deaths mar ceasefire

Britain sets Feb. 27 for Rhodesia election day announced a general election in Rhodesia for Feb. 27 to 29.

Interim British Governor Lord Soames said 80 black seats in the parliament of an independent Z imbabwe would be voted on during three days of nationwide polling.

The election will be monitored by a British supervisory commission and monitored by about 100 Commonwealth observers.

The British-supervised election is part of an overall peace agreement negotiated during 15 weeks of talks between the Salisbury government and Patriotic Front guerrillas on will take place separately on Feb. 14.

Meanwhile, apprehension and uncertainty over the ceasefire arrangements increased the supreme court and the national congress must agree sufficient evidence exists. The commission also ruled that there was enough evidence to try a memher of Perez's cabinet and two other officials of his administration for alleged involvement in the

The ship was hought in Norway in 1977 for $20 million, but the commission said the real market value was $11.8 million.

In late October the Ethics Committee of Perez's own party Democratic Action declared he was "morally and administratively responsible" for the purchase of the ship. The committee also said two high officials of his administration shared responsibilon Dec. 26, but the news only emerged Thursday, British officials considered General Tongogara a key figure in ensuring the success of the peace settlement. His backing for the ceasefire was expected to encourage guerrillas to obey its rules and come in from the bush to designated assembly points.

A hero to the Patriotic Front, he was to have arrived in Salisbury Friday to help oversee the ceasefire.

A preliminary inquiry into the deaths of he three British members of the ceasefire monitoring force established that the crash of their helicopter was almost certainly an accident. It apparently hit a telegraph pole.

A single shot also hit a British transport plane as it flew over bush country but there were no casualties. Both aircraft were involved in the dispersal of monitoring troops to the Patriotic Front's 24 rendezvous points and 16 assembly points scattered around the country.

The troops from Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Fiji and Kenya would not arrive at their final posts until late Friday afternoon to minimize the risk of accidential clashes with the guerrillas. British military officials said.

The ceasefire is the first crucial stage in the settlement plan agreed by Britain, the Patriotic Front and the former Salisbury government. It will herald a two-month election campaign which should culminate in the choice of a new government under a fresh Implementing the ceasefire "is vital if the peace agreement is to succeed," a senior British official commented.

But many Rhodesians were sceptical Friday that it would work, pointing to a steady stream of casualties during what should have heen a wind-down period in the fighting.

Body washed ashore in England

Brilliant young pianist found dead LONDON, Dec. 281 AP) - The body of a man washed up on a beach was identified by police Thursday as one of England's most hrilliant young pianists who had been missing

Terence Judd. 22, vanished from his parent's home in west London only days before he was scheduled to leave for a concert tour of the Sovier Union, where he placed fourth in the prestigious Tchaikovsky piano competition in Moscow last year.

An inquest will be held on Friday. Police sources say no foul play is suspected and the planist may have committed suicide. But Judd's death remains a mystery.

"He had everything to live for." the planist's father. Anthony Judd, said, "This is a tragedy not just to us, but to the music world

Judd was a serious, soft-spoken young man who hid a wry sense of humor behind his horn-rimmed glasses and curly brown hair.

He had been an odds-on favorite to win first prize at the Tchaikovsky Competition, but was still pleased at placing fourth.

The award opened many doors for him in the difficult world of music. He toured Europe, played with number of orchestras and gave solo recitals at Queen Elizabeth Hall here - all rare honors for a pianist as young as he was.

The six-concert Russian tour was to have started with a performance in Moscow on Christmas day and included an appearance with the Leningard Philharmonic Orchestra.

It was to have been his third trip to the Soviet Union since the Tchaikovsky Competition, and he was said to be avidly awaiting it.

He left home after Sunday Lunch Dec. 16 for a mid-afternoon stroll, wearing light blue trousers and a fur-collared coat and cap. He had no money or luggage with him, and no passport or papers.

LONDON, Dec. 281R) - An extra 61st second will be added to the final minute of 1979 to compensate for irregularities of the speed of the Earth's rotation on its axis and prevent possibly wide navigational errors by ships at sea.

Dr. John Pilkington, a physicist and astronomer at the Royal Observatory at Greenwich, said such "leap" seconds have to be added periodically to prevent a cumulative effect on clocks which would affect navigation.

He said, "For a mariner using a sextant, an error of one second would mean that every sighting he made would be a quarter of a mile out. And if no adjustments were made for 20 years, his sightings would be five miles out."

An authority of the Paris-based International Office of Time, a 'leap" second has been added to all the world's official clocks nine times since 1972, when time was first measured by atomic clocks, which have an accuracy of one part in 100,000 million. There have been two mid-year correc-

reveals plans to make boats safer organizers of the Fastnet International Yacht Race are studying ways of improving safety standards after the tragedy in August in which 15 people died, the Royal Ocean Racing Club (RORC) said Friday.

An independent inquiry report published earlier this month criticized safety equipment and boat design but said the real cause of the disaster was the "violence of the sea, an unremitting danger faced by all who sail."

The race, from the south English coast to the Fastnet Rock at the southern op of Ireland and back. was torn apart hy winds of up to 50

Those ahoard the Leavitt were evacuated to life rafts and hoisted into helicopters. It was not immediately known if any of those aboard had been injured.

After three years of work, the Leavitt was launched with great fanfare from Thomaston, Maine, in August. Ackerman, a former medieval scholar and former English instructor at Merrimack College in North Andover, Massachusetts, named the vessel after maritime scholar John F. Leavitt.

Ackerman's optimism was portrayed by the figurehead on the Leavitt's bow - a grining fox with a large feather protruding from its

Modeled after 19th century prototypes, the red-and-whitehulled Leavitt was powered by wind pressing against its 6,440 square feet of canvas sail rigged fore and aft atop 80-foot masts. With no engines abourd, its only fuel requirement was a small amount of diesel oil needed for its pumps, generators and hydraulic cargo hoists. Estimates of the cost of building the vessel started at $ 300,000, but Ackerman never disclused an exact figure.

The Leavitt's cargo capacity was 150 ions, the equivalent of five semi-trailer truckloads. The crew abourd the vessel was reportedly preparing a documentary on the revival of sailing
